TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Ana María Blázquez, Vice-dean of degree in marine sciences of the Catholic University of Valencia, states that Franciscon Nomdedeu has been my student in the degree of Marine Sciences in the subjects of Sedimentology, Geographic Information Systems and Remote Sensing and Protected Spaces and Recovery of Species.

I would like to highlight his curiosity, imagination, enthusiasm and positive attitude to face new problems and new challenges that arise, as well as his capacity for teamwork helping to ensure an optimal work environment. He has done many fieldwork at the Research Institute in Environment and Marine Science (IMEDMAR) and mobility with studies and internships for a year in Aveiro (Portugal).

For all these reasons, I recommend the application of Francisco Nomdedeu Martinez in postgraduate programs so that he can continue his academic training. I firmly believe that he is an excellent candidate who will know how to integrate herself into new groups and new tasks and projects, with the same aptitudes and attitudes that I have previously pointed out, with professional and social responsibility.

Best regards.

Ana Blázquez
